NEW YORK CITY-BASED ARTIST ENGAGES ATTRACTIONSEEKER TO PROMOTE EXHIBITION IN LOS ANGELES

Duhirwe Rushemeza Studio (www.duhirwe.com) teamed up with Attractionseeker to promote a May 25th art exhibition at the Reginald Ingraham Gallery in Los Angeles.

San Francisco, CA, May 6, 2013

A spokesperson for Attractionseeker announced today that Harlem-based Duhirwe Rushemeza Studio surpassed a $12,500 fundraising goal a full day ahead of a deadline to support "Had I Been Raised in the Village..." an upcoming art exhibition at the Reginald Ingraham Gallery in Los Angeles, CA. The studio created a mobile ad on Attractionseeker reaching thousands of devices to engage its campaign on Kickstarter, the world's largest funding platform for creative projects. People are able to support the project by downloading the Attractionseeker app, clicking on the artist's mobile ad and making a pledge which ends on Tuesday, May 7th at 5PM EDT.

"I'm really excited about this great opportunity to share my work on the West Coast," the highly talented artist exclaimed. Ms. Rushemeza continued, "Because the Kickstarter campaign is all or nothing, I needed support from different avenues like Attractionseeker."

Ms. Rushemeza is creating new pieces to be included in the exhibition. Due to the size of many of the works, they will require special attention to protect their journey to L.A. Support from backers will ensure success in completing the works and their proper shipment.

"I am thrilled to work with Ms. Rushemeza," commented Drew Wade, Attractionseeker CEO. "We recognize the success of our company is dependent on helping small businesses and local attractions, which of course includes art galleries and amazing artists like Duhirwe Rushemeza."
